Interactive Session Experience

Including activities and participant driven discussion in your session can make an enormous difference in attendee engagement, retention of knowledge, and overall satisfaction. Involving your audience will make attendees feel like they are part of the conversation. We ask that you consider working one or more of the suggestions below in your presentation.

Please keep in mind the room will be set to maximum capacity (ranging between 100 and 400 people) in theater style seating. AIHA will not provide equipment or material other than that outlined in the speaker toolkit. No exceptions will be made.

* - indicates a required item.

*Please mark the option(s) below that that you will include in your session. We will publish these on your session's webpage on the conference website as well as in your session's listing in the mobile app to help attendees better plan their schedule and navigate sessions on-site.

- Polling – Using a web or application-based poll in your PowerPoint allowing attendees to vote on a question.
- Campfire – Campfire sessions begin a lot like a traditional presentation, with a speaker (or multiple speakers) at the front of the room presenting an idea to a group of people. After 15 or 20 minutes, however, the focus shifts from the presenter to the audience. For the remainder of the session, the presenter becomes a facilitator, inviting comments, insights, and questions from those around the room. This allows attendees to drive their own learning and share experiences with others, which also assists with networking.
- Quiz - Use a couple of your slides as quick “quizzes” that the audience answers. For instance, you could have the audience “fill in the blanks” in one or more of your slides.
- Demo - Perform a demo and have an audience member participate in it.
- Small Group Discussion - Divide your audience into small groups to discuss the topic among themselves and share with the larger group afterwards.
- Q&A – The typical Q&A session can be a quick (and often abrupt) end to a session when the speaker asks if there are any questions and the audience doesn't respond; however, if you place it in the middle of a presentation, it can be a fantastic way to wake up your audience and invite a little participation. Even if you don't answer questions right away, the unexpected invitation to ask a question can act as a trigger to encourage audience members to speak up.
- Unconferences – Unconferences are participant-driven. The agenda is created by the participants at the beginning of the session. It revolves around the overarching theme announced by the moderator, and it adapts to your specific attendees' interests. The facilitator crowd-sources the topics from the audience, consolidates them, and then your attendees form discussion groups. In a nutshell, the intention of the unconference is to tap into the wisdom of the crowd.
